Saints and Strangers: Push and Pull on the Way to Plymouth Colony

Why did the Saints and Strangers immigrate to North America?

Overview

Students analyze the motivations for the Saints and Strangers to immigrate to North America by reading secondary sources and working in teams to determine the push and pull factors.

Directions

1. Draw on personal experiences and stories about migration.

Write the following prompt on the board: Why do people move? Describe a time that you, someone you know, or your ancestors moved. Where did they move from, and where did they move to? Why did they choose to move? Ask students to take a few minutes to write their responses. Have students share their answers with the class. As students share, write on the board some of the reasons people chose to move.

2. Define push and pull factors.

Explain to students that human migration is often analyzed in terms of push and pull factors. Ask: What is a “push factor”? What is a “pull factor”? After collecting some student answers, summarize by explaining that a “push factor” is something that causes a person to leave their homeland. A “pull factor” is something that draws that person to the new place. Draw a T chart on the board. Label one column “push factors” and the other column “pull factors”. Have students look over the list of reasons for movement that they generated based on their quick writes. Ask: Which of these reasons are push factors? Which are pull factors? List student responses in the T chart as students decide the column in which each factor should be placed. Explain to students that they will read about the Saints and Strangers, the two groups of people who traveled aboard the Mayflower. Using the information they gather, students will identify the push and pull factors that influenced their move from Europe to North America.
3. Analyze readings about why the Saints and Strangers migrated from Europe to North America.

Distribute the worksheet From Europe to North America: The Saints to half of the students in the class. Distribute From Europe to North America: The Strangers to the other half of the class. Ask students to work individually to complete the reading and highlight and annotate the text to answer the question: Why did the Saints (or Strangers) immigrate to North America? Once students complete their individual reading, divide students into groups of four, with two students who read about the Saints and two who read about the Strangers. Have students summarize the key points they identified from their reading for their group.

4. Identify push and pull factors and provide evidence.

Distribute the Saints and Strangers Graphic Organizer and one set of Push & Pull Factor Cards to each group. Read the instructions on the Graphic Organizer to the class, and then give students time to work together in their groups of four to complete the organizer. Encourage students to discuss how each card applies to the story of the Strangers or the Saints or both. Students should include multiple pieces of evidence whenever possible. They can also write evidence on the back of the Push & Pull Factor Card.

After students have completed the Graphic Organizer, lead students in a discussion about each of the six boxes on the Graphic Organizer. Encourage students to share their results by asking questions such as:

- Which cards did you identify as a push factor for the Saints?
- What push or pull factors did the Saints and Strangers have in common?
- How did the two groups differ in their reasons for moving to North America?

When students respond, follow up with questions such as:

- Do other groups agree?
- Can you point to evidence from the reading that supports your claim?
- Did anyone find a different quote that provides additional evidence for how this push or pull factor applies to the Saints or Strangers?

5. Write a historical narrative as a Saint or a Stranger.

Distribute the Historical Narrative Writing Assignment & Rubric. Invite a volunteer to read aloud the directions to the class. Ask students to think about the motivations for immigration that they have identified for the Saints and Strangers. They will now use that information to compose a letter from a Saint or a Stranger (their choice) to someone back in England. In their letter they must clearly articulate some of the reasons they chose to immigrate to North America. Point out the rubric for the writing assignment, and emphasize that well-chosen historical details and clear writing will be keys to success for this assignment.

Modification
ELL or lower-level readers could be partnered with stronger readers to analyze the readings and to apply the Push & Pull Factor Cards.

Tip
If students struggle to comprehend the readings, project the readings and get students started by reading a portion of the text aloud. While reading, model how to highlight key points and annotate the text.

Tip
Student groupings can be done in different ways. Use a system that works best for the number and abilities of students in your classroom.

Tip
To promote equal participation during group work, have students take alternating turns to draw a Push & Pull Factor Card and lead group discussion about that card.

Alternative Assessment
- Formatively assess students’ completion of the Saints and Strangers Graphic Organizer during group work. Students should provide evidence from the readings to support each decision of how a Push & Pull Factor Card applies.
- Collect students’ historical narratives and assess their work using the rubric.

Extending the Learning
- Have students use the Push & Pull Factor Cards to analyze periods of immigration throughout U.S. history. For example, which cards help explain push and pull factors for Irish and German immigrants during the mid-19th century, or for Southern and Eastern European immigrants during the late 19th and 20th centuries?
- Give students excerpts from Jeff Libman’s An Immigrant Class, and have them identify some patterns between early immigrants to North America and immigrants who come to America today. What are some ways these two groups’ push and pull factors are the same? How are they different? What does America represent to immigrants who come here today? Does this representation seem to have changed since the 17th century?

Objectives

Subjects & Disciplines
Social Studies
- Human behavior
- United States history

Learning Objectives
Students will:
• explain the push and pull factors that motivated the Saints and the Strangers aboard the Mayflower to immigrate to North America
• use evidence from secondary texts to defend claims about the motivations of the Saints and Strangers to immigrate to North America
• develop the imagined experience of being a Saint or Stranger traveling to North America

Background & Vocabulary

Background Information
In 1620, the Mayflower set sail to bring 102 men, women, and children from England to North America. On board the ship were two groups, religious separatists who called themselves the “Saints,” and many individuals whom the Saints deemed “Strangers.” Each group had different motivations for immigrating to North America. The Saints immigrated to find a land where they could practice their Separatist religion freely, create a pious society, and lead prosperous lives. The Strangers immigrated for a variety of reasons including adventure, a chance to escape the poor economic conditions in England, and the possibility to create wealth in the new colonies.
