

A person in a red shirt and blue pants is riding a dark horse on the edge of a large, flat-topped rock formation. The landscape is a vast, arid desert with other similar rock formations in the background under a clear sky.

Science contributes to our culture in many ways, as a creative intellectual activity in its own right, as the light which has served to illuminate man's place in the universe, and as the source of understanding of man's own nature.

— U.S. President John F. Kennedy